

Paderewski on Concert Stage Again This Fall

Pianist Will Resume Public Playing in November After 5 Years' Service in Behalf of Poland's Freedom

Sails for a Rest Abroad

Three Young U. S. Entrants in International Gliding Contests Also on Savoie

Ignace Jan Paderewski sailed yesterday on the Savoie, but is to return to the concert stage in this country and in Canada next winter for a limited number of engagements after an absence of five years which he devoted to the service of his country, Poland, where he was Premier, and organized the first national government Poland has had for a century.

The pianist is to take a rest at his chateau, Rion, on Lake Geneva, and will return to the United States in November to start his tour. In 1915 and 1916 and during the winter of 1917, Paderewski was engaged not only in his concert career, but in organizing Poles in this country in the interest of the allied cause and in obtaining money for relief work in Poland.

Helped Polish Independence

In 1917 his ambition of placing a Polish army in the field against Germany and Austria was realized, and he gave up his profession to engage solely in national service. In this he was active in New York and Washington until the signing of the armistice, and is said to have exerted the influence which impelled President Wilson to insist upon independence for Poland in formulating his peace terms.

When the fighting had ceased Paderewski went to Europe in the interests of his country and was persuaded by the British government to go to Warsaw. There he organized the government of Poland, of which he became Prime Minister. His first official act was to call a general election.

During the peace conference Paderewski was in Paris, intent upon obtaining Polish rights. In the spring of 1920 he represented Poland at the Council of Ambassadors. In the fall of that year he headed the Polish delegation at the meeting of the League of Nations in Geneva.

Also on the Savoie were three young Americans who are on their way to represent the United States in the international gliding contests which are to be held at Clermont-Ferrand, near Lyons, France, in August.

The gliders are Edmund T. Allen, twenty-six years of age, of Chicago; Harry C. Karcher, twenty years of age, of Mansfield, Ohio; and Otto C. Kopp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Miss Margaret Christie, of the American Committee for Devastated France, also is on the Savoie.

Wall St. To Be Invaded By Foes of Prohibition

Membership Campaign To Be Conducted in Down-Town Financial District

Wall Street and the financial district will be invaded beginning tomorrow by the New York State Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. The object is to increase membership, and an intensive drive will be made in the district.

The women of the association will take an active part in the intensive drive for membership.

Temporary headquarters for the drive have been set at 2 Rector Street, where noonday meetings will be held under the auspices of the women's committee. Prominent men and women will give twenty minute talks against prohibition daily between 12:30 and 1:30. The speakers at tomorrow's meeting will be Miss Alice Carpenter, Stanley H. Howe and Colonel C. L. Withrow. Among the women now serving on the committee are:

Mrs. Harry Chester Arthur, Mrs. Don Barber, Mrs. Mary Carr, Mrs. W. Campbell Clark, Mrs. Henry Clark Coe, Mrs. Charles H. Dison, Mrs. Richard Dorsey, Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mrs. Scott Gabriel, Mrs. Ransom H. Gillett, Mrs. Francis Burrell Hoffman, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, Mrs. James B. Lowell, Mrs. Alice Foster McDowell, Mrs. E. M. McVicker, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, Mrs. Walter Leonard, Mrs. John Purroy Mitchell, Mrs. Gouverneur Morris, Mrs. L. K. Wilmerding and many others.

The council of the American Shoe Workers' Protective Union yesterday announced the adoption of a resolution endorsing the society's fight against the Volstead law.

Cox Spent $200,000 for Planes, Company Says

Texas Oil Promoter Sued for Return of Funds Said to Have Been Misused

Seymour B. J. Cox, Texas stock promoter, recently accused of indicted embezzling him with using the mails in fraud, was made a defendant in the Supreme Court in a suit brought by the trustees of the General Oil Company to recover $200,000 from Mr. Cox and the Curtis Aeroplane and Motor Company. Other defendants are Mrs. Cox and the officers of two of Mr. Cox's Texas corporations, which have a combined capitalization of $21,000,000.

Mr. Cox was formerly president and general manager of the General Oil Company, now in the hands of a receiver, and the money sued for is alleged to have been used by Mr. Cox in the purchase of two racing aeroplanes in 1920. Mr. Cox, as vice-president of the Aero Club of Texas, entered two aeroplanes in the James Gordon Bennett international cup race in France in 1920. It is alleged further that Mr. Cox made assignments of his interest in the aeroplanes to his wife and several officers of corporations of which he was dominating figure.

The Curtis company has filed an answer saying that in April and July, 1920, they entered into agreements with Mrs. Cox for the construction of two racing planes of special design. The company now has possession of the planes, in accordance with an agreement made with Mr. and Mrs. Cox in March, 1922.

"Enright for Governor?"

CORNING, N. Y., July 15.—Richard E. Enright, Police Commissioner of New York City, a native of Campbell, N. Y., is being considered as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor at the meeting of the Steuben County Democratic Convention here this afternoon.

Thomas H. Enright, of New York, former secretary to Mayor McCall, of New York, and a former Steuben County resident, attended the meeting and was instrumental in bringing about the adoption of the resolution.

Hughes Silent on League Snubs, Is Fosdick Comment

Reply to Hamilton Holt Is Interesting Because of Its Omissions, Avers Former Under Secretary General

Raymond B. Fosdick, formerly Under Secretary of the League of Nations, commented yesterday on the statements contained in the letter of Secretary of State Hughes to Hamilton Holt, bearing on the attitude of the Administration toward the League of Nations.

"Secretary Hughes' statement," writes Mr. Fosdick, "is interesting for what it omits. It neglects to say that up until last August no communication of the league addressed to the State Department was answered and that when public opinion expressed itself on the matter of this discourtesy, fourteen such communications were answered in a batch, some of them being months old."

He further omits to say that when the league's first conference on the white slave traffic was held, the State Department denied that it had received an invitation, and even when it was forced to acknowledge that an invitation had long been replying in its files, it made no effort to put itself right. Similarly the league's invitation to attend the Barcelona Transit Conference was not answered.

"Mr. Hughes also omitted to say that the attitude of the State Department on the question of the league's program of mandates nearly wrecked the whole plan. He also omitted to say that the refusal of the State Department to consent to the amalgamation of the International Office or Public Health with the health section of the League of Nations had nearly crippled the health work which is now being carried on with enthusiasm by fifty-one nations."

"A pertinent question would be whether in spite of its non-membership the United States is obliged to thwart the league at every possible point. Do we have to treat the league with contempt just because we do not belong to it?"

Tells of Holy Land Fight

Apostolic Delegate Believes Patriotic Would Drop Zionists

ROME, July 14.—Friedano Giannini, apostolic delegate from Syria, who has just arrived here in order to discuss with the Pope conditions among the missions in the Holy Land, when interviewed, gave as his opinion:

"I firmly believe England would willingly rid herself of the responsibility of protecting the Zionist movement in Palestine for which for economic reasons they at first accepted the mandate. The Arabs are determined to unite against the domination of the Jews and the latter themselves are not united, the preference in all questions being given by the Zionist Committee to Russian and Rumanian Jews who escaped from Russia and who have been allotted land bought from the Greek Church, which the Arabs are not allowed to buy, though they are clever agriculturists."

"The Zionist committee hold absolute power over sales and disposal of the lands and everything connected with trade and commerce. The Arabs intend to fight for their rights."

Senators Halt Tariff Debate To Praise Reed

Smoot Joins Democrats in Paying Tribute to Ability of Missourian, Who Is Fighting for Re-election

'Need Force of His Logic'

Shields Laments Absence of One Whose 'War Cry All Republicans Have Heard'

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senators took time off from the tariff debate today to shower praises on Senator "Jim" Reed, of Missouri, now engaged in the battle of his political life. Senator Shields, of Tennessee, and other Democratic Senators commended Senator Reed and Senator Smoot, of Utah, Republican, added a tribute. Senator Smoot's commendation in particular caused surprise, in view of the fact that Missouri Republicans are working hard to capture Reed's seat.

Senator Shields brought up the subject. He expressed his regret at the absence of Senator Reed in the discussion of the tariff. Senator Shields said:

There has been necessarily absent during this long discussion one of the ablest members of this body, a Senator who has always been in the front of the battle lines of the tariff, whose absence all good and true Democrats, desiring the success of their party, regret, and who rejoices all Republicans, who when the principles of Democracy were at stake have heard his fierce war cry and felt the force of his logic.

All the Senators in this chamber know of his speech, and it is not necessary to pronounce the name of James A. Reed, the senior Senator from Missouri. I have been led to refer to the absence of Senator Reed by a statement made by his colleague, Senator Spencer, and commented on in an editorial appearing in 'The News Scimitar,' an able paper published in Memphis.

Senator Shields read the editorial in which 'The News Scimitar' said the result in Missouri was of vital concern to the Republican party, since it involved whether Missouri was to have a Democratic Senator or two Republican Senators. It said the Republicans know it will be easy to defeat Long and that no one knows this better than Senator Spencer, who defeated Long two years ago. The editorial added that the Republicans had no right to expect a Democratic nomination of any kind, but rather to expect a Republican Senator.

Senator Simmons, after deploring that Senator Reed could not be present to assist in the tariff debate, said: "No man has been in the United States Senate since I have been here is better capable of discussing this question than the senior Senator from Missouri. His analytical powers, his tireless energy, his great abilities, would have been of great help if he could have been here."

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, said: "I agree with the Senator from Tennessee, Mr. Reed, in his controversies between Democrats we have no right to take part. Mr. Long is a personal friend of mine, for whom I entertain high regard, but I do say that Senator Reed, if he could be here, would be of great strength to his party."

Cochran Out as Chief P. O. Inspector Here

Veteran of 30 Years' Service Will Take Less Responsible Place in Department

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 15.—After serving thirty years in the Postoffice Department, during which time he has held many important posts, William E. Cochran has relinquished the position of inspector in charge of the New York division of postoffice inspectors to take up work of less responsibility in the postal inspection service. Charles H. Claranhan has been transferred from the Philadelphia district to the New York assignment vacated by Mr. Cochran.

Mr. Cochran has been in charge of the postal inspectors in New York State since 1913. He has successfully handled many important cases, including the general investigation of the Postoffice Department in 1903, which resulted in the prosecution and conviction of a number of officials, and, more recently, the holding of a mail truck on Broadway, New York City, which culminated in the apprehension of the bandits and recovery of large sums in stolen securities.

Tacna Issue Up to Hughes

Chilean-Peruvian Conference Are Awaiting His Suggestions

WASHINGTON, July 15 (By The Associated Press).—Having again invoked informally the aid of the United States government, the Chilean-Peruvian conference stood in recess today waiting for the suggestion from Secretary Hughes which was expected to bring the Tacna-Arica arbitration agreement speedily to a consummation.

It was said to be the desire on both sides to phrase the protocol that it could not be interpreted as a renunciation of present rights either by Chile or Peru, and as an endorsement of the claim of either to sovereignty over the province in the absence of a plebiscite.

It was planned to hold a joint meeting of the conference on Monday after the two delegations headed by Carlos Aldunate and Dr. Meliton Porras, had conferred with Secretary Hughes.

Love Breaks Mother's Stoicism At Sight of Abandoned Baby

Left Child in Swamp With Bottle of Milk After All Institutions Had Refused to Take Her In, She Declares

"I did it on impulse; I was desperate. It seemed the only thing to do at the time, but afterward I was sorry. I was really, I'm not a really tough girl, and I love my baby. If only I could support her, I'd never let her go."

Leah Silver, the unmarried mother, soon to become a mother again, broke down and sobbed broken-heartedly in the Coney Island police station last night. Charged with abandoning her fifteen-month-old daughter in a swamp at the edge of Coney Island Creek two weeks ago, the girl had brazenly faced the situation all through a nerve-racking day. Arrested in New Haven on Friday night, she had traveled to New York in the morning with a detective by her side, and had successfully matched wits with a squad of news photographers seeking to catch her in an unwary moment.

In the afternoon she had gone with detectives to the Kings County Hospital, where the tiny arms of her neglected child had been stretched out trustfully to her again. She had cried a little over the hundred scars of mosquito bites which still mark the baby's body, but she resumed her poise on the return trip to the police station. So they took her at last, defiant as ever, to the little room which serves the women police attendant for an hour. A Tribune reporter found her there and asked her one question. "Don't you love your baby?"

Her little swarthy face assumed a bewildered, cornered look, and all the pretenses vanished. She put her hands to her face with a swift, catching movement. The tears welled up into her brown eyes, and suddenly she dropped her head in her hands and sobbed.

"I do, I do indeed I do," she said brokenly. And then the whole story came out. There isn't anything romantic about it, or about Leah either. Short and slight, the girl stands straight and looks the world in the eye after the fashion of those who have wrestled with misfortune continually and have learned to trust no one. Outside she is hard as nails, an unresponsive, demoralized girl, cheaply dressed in red and white checked gingham, a faded blue straw hat, black stockings and two-tone oxfords, which go over at the heels.

"I was born in Hull, England," she said. "My father died years ago. My mother is almost an invalid and she has done everything she could for me. I went to school and then to Lynn, Mass. I have two brothers. They are no good. If it weren't for my mother they'd starve to death. She goes out begging, though how she does it I don't know."

"My baby was born a year and three months ago. The father was a sailor. I met him in Lynn. On the street, of course, he picked me up. I suppose how. How else would a girl meet a fellow? Never mind what his name is. "When the baby was born I asked him to help me. He couldn't. He didn't have a nickel. He was going to re-enlist and the last I heard of him he was on the U. S. S. Bronco. I don't know where he is. I wrote to the Navy Department and they didn't even answer my letter."

"I went to Boston with my baby—to the State Charities people. They told me they didn't have any institutions for babies that weren't wanted, and they couldn't help me. They said if I could work I should work and support her myself. I went to a Catholic home, too. They would have taken her, but they couldn't because she wasn't three years old."

"Then I came to New York. I'd never been here before. I took a taxi driver to take me to an institution. He said he'd fix me up. I gave him $5 and he drove me out here. He stopped the car and carried the baby out to the vacant lot. There were houses all around, and he said she'd be sure to be found in half an hour at the most."

"I don't know I never thought she'd be out there all night. I left her with a bottle of milk. The chauffeur told me she'd be sure to be found in half an hour."

From the police it was learned that the girl gave the name of the child's father as Raymond Cullen.

Baby Ruth is still at Kings County Hospital, while her mother remains in jail lacking friends or influence to secure bail. Ten years is the maximum sentence on the abandonment charge.

Taxi Driver Knocked Her Senseless, Says Woman

Sister of St. Louis Cattle Buyer Says She Refused to Pay Fare to Wrong Destination

A woman who was found unconscious Tuesday beside a road in Staten Island recovered her senses yesterday in Bellevue Hospital and said she was Helen Greiner, of St. Louis, and that it was a taxicab driver who beat her and left her when she was four.

She came to New York Sunday, she said, with her brother, Clayton Greiner, a cattle buyer in St. Louis. They went to a hotel the name of which she does not remember. Tuesday her brother had to make a trip to Rhode Island on business and she drove with him to the Grand Central Terminal.

The fare from the hotel to the station was 75 cents, she remembers. After her brother had left her she engaged another taxicab to take her back to the hotel, handing the driver a card which bore the name of the hotel. The driver took her to a hotel in Staten Island, she said, and demanded $2.70. She refused to pay it, she said, and he dragged her from the cab and beat her into insensibility.

New Jersey Clergymen Talk With Chief Justice

Three Jersey City clergymen and their attorney called on Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze yesterday at Jersey City, and had a half hour's conference with him in connection with their efforts to stop the Tender-Leonard boxing match scheduled for July 27 at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City. Upon leaving the Justice the clergymen declined to say anything about the conference, further than that it had been in connection with their opposition to the forthcoming lightweight championship match. It is supposed that they sought to have a special session of the grand jury called.

Justice Swayze last September, when he charged the grand jury, told it to investigate the Dempsey-Carpenter match, which he said was a fight, and therefore illegal. The grand jury finished its work without finding an indictment in connection with the match.

Asks Pan-American League Defense Against Europe Sought by Uruguay's Plan

WASHINGTON, July 15 (By The Associated Press).—The government of Uruguay has proposed as a principle to be adopted by the nations attending the fifth Pan-American conference, to be held in Santiago, Chile, next March, that all countries of the American continent will consider as an encroachment upon their rights of any one of them, inflicted by a non-American power, and that such encroachment would give rise to a common and uniform attitude of all nations of America.

Uruguay also has proposed that an American league of nations be formed to bring about the observance of the principle.

Blackjack King Swoons At 90 Days on Rockpile

Emil Hrynak, Bayonne's "King of Blackjacks," found himself under arrest again yesterday, but evinced no great anxiety until he learned the charge was disorderly conduct. Heretofore, it has been assault, and, after waiving examination, Emil went his royal way, grand juries refusing to indict him.

"I've been waiting for four years to give you a chance to break rocks," said Recorder Cain, noting with satisfaction that the charge was one in which he had summary jurisdiction. "You managed to avoid sentence every other time you were before me. This time I am going to see that Bayonne is made a safe place in which to live for at least three months."

At the sentence, Emil indulged in a swoon which lasted an hour.

Dr. Angell Convalescing In New Haven Hospital

Yale President's Indisposition Attributed to Overexertion During Commencement

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 15.—James Rowland Angell, president of Yale University, is in New Haven Hospital, but his physicians believe he will return home in a few days. At first it was thought that President Angell might have typhoid fever, but this has proved not to be so, and his indisposition is attributed to overexertion during the commencement season at the university.

Dr. Angell has been in the hospital for three weeks, although this was known to but few persons. He went there for complete rest and for treatment of what was considered a slight ailment. The relaxation after a strenuous month had its reflex in a show

Door Shown to Communists at Radical Rally

"Workers' Party" Is Considered Too Red for Socialists. Trades Unionists and Farmer-Laborites

Delegates Denied Seats

Chairman Lefkowitz and Editor Oneal Led Fight on "Third Internationale"

An attempt on the part of the Workers' party—the official Communist party—to capture the joint conference of the trades unions, Farmer-Labor party and Socialist party at the opening yesterday met with failure.

For a time it looked as if the Communists were in the majority, but the rulings of the chairman, Abraham Lefkowitz, a delegate from the Farmer-Labor party, supported by speeches of Abraham I. Shipman, of the I. O. O. F., and James O'Neal, editor of "The Call," prevented the ultra-radicals from gaining control.

"The Workers' party," said Mr. O'Neal, "is affiliated with the Communist Internationale, which has ordered its groups in all countries to join in these harmonious front organizations, not to aid their efforts, but, instead, to spread Communist propaganda. I, for one, would be glad to join them if they would work with us, but they won't. They want to get in and capture the organization and create splits, so that the worker in the end is worse off than before."

As the day progressed and the conservatives saw that they had control, the question of admitting the Workers' party was put to a vote and defeated by 204 to 45.

It was said that upward of eighty trades unions, including the Structural Iron Workers, the Fur Workers, the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the Painters and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, were represented at the convention, which has for its purpose the organizing of a third party, with the Socialists and Farmer-Laborites as a nucleus.

Some of the unions sent members of the Workers' party as delegates, but the vote excluded them. In some of the unions, as in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, both Socialists and Communists were present, but in every instance the Socialist delegate was seated.

Outside of routine matters, yesterday's session did little. It is expected that at to-day's meeting Edward Cassidy and Charles P. Steinmetz, the nominees of the Socialist and Farmer-Labor parties for Governor and State Engineer, will be endorsed.
